Private Wealth Management / Family Office

For any family with $100 million or more in assets, managing those assets can be a full-time job. Ultra-wealthy families typically have dozens of trusts and partnerships, and an array of investments that require oversight and performance reporting. They also need sophisticated cash flow and liquidity management, not to mention extensive tax, estate, and philanthropic planning.
The complexity of performing all these functions can be overwhelming, which is why an increasing number of ultra-high-net-worth families are creating family offices to manage their wealth. We will also look into it, topics to be highlighted are as follows:

How to decide what your Family Office should outsource

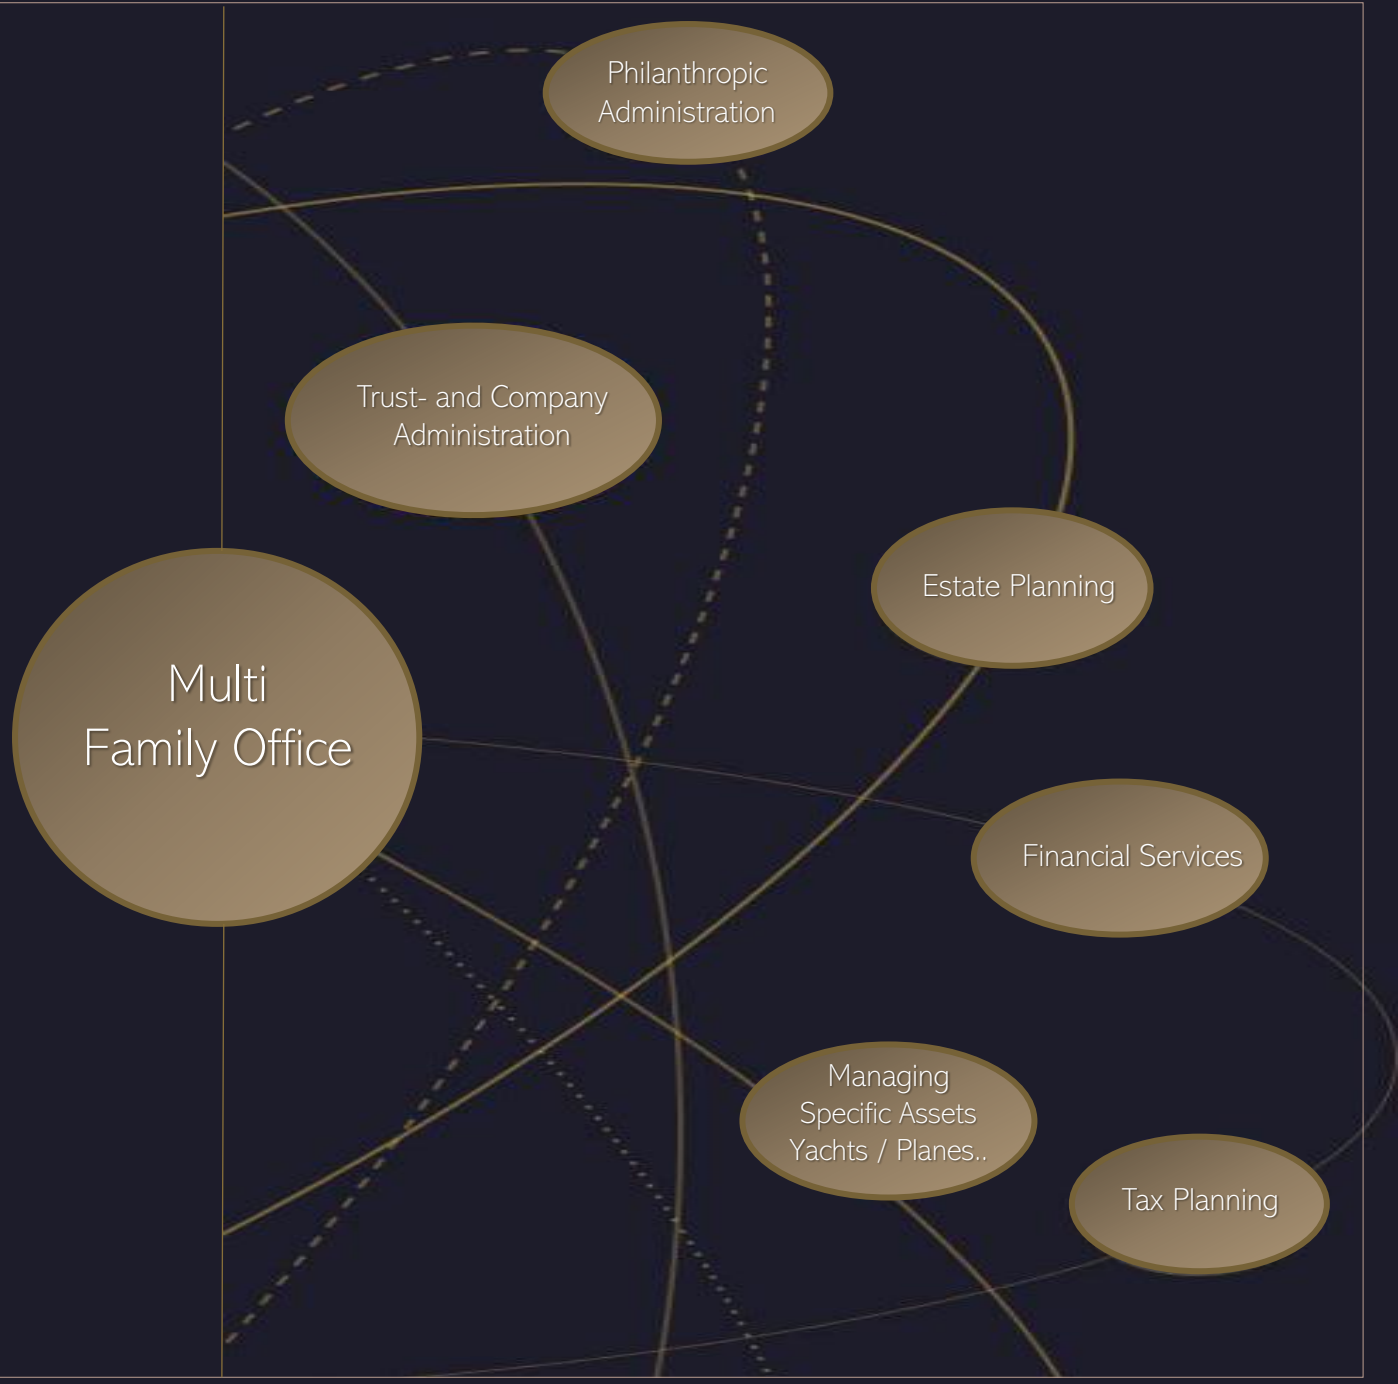

Securing Legacy through Philanthropy

Around the Regulatory World

What are Family Offices investing in?

What's new in Property?

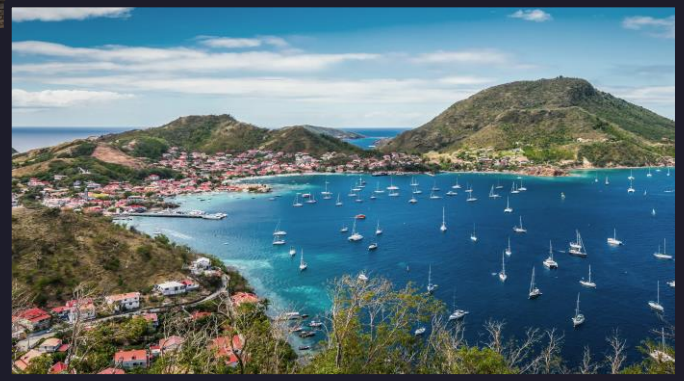

The Future Family Office

Citizenship by Investment

With an increase of wealthy citizens in investing or buying property in exchange for citizenship or residency, commonly referred as “Citizenship by Investment” through the considerations and options in today’s dual citizenship market, we will also highlight some of them.
